31-The Brutal Rejection

“What should be done!” He mumbled, “I, Alpha King Maddox Spade, reject Beatrice Mintz as my mate.”

He finished, and unfiltered tears rushed out of my eyes onto my expressionless face.

“You heard me, I reject you!” he shouted, and that’s when I woke up from the state of trance.

“What?” I stepped back, staring at his face with tears in my eyes. This is not what I expected from my mate.

“I reject you!” he repeated, but didn’t wince. Being an Alpha King has given him the advantage of not feeling any pain even after breaking the mate bond with his mate.

Of course, he expected me to feel pain whenever my wolf awakes, but for now, all I could feel was heartbreak and disappointment. He was supposed to keep me protected and safe, not reject me.

It was then that I felt like I didn't need him anymore.

"I accept your rejection," I muttered while looking back into his eyes with anger. He broke the bond with me, so I don't need him. I still have three other mates.

I noticed the frown on his forehead before he scoffed and grabbed my arm with force.

"Good! Now get the fuck out of here." His words gave me an idea of his plans. He didn't only plan to reject me, he wanted me out of their lives. His and his brother's lives.

"No! Mom said this is my home now." I refused to go. Was he really expecting me to walk out on my own on such a dark and stormy night?

"Your mom and you can go to hell." He grabbed my arm again after I had freed myself and dragged me to the door, but I resisted.

"What are you doing?" I let out a cry, fighting to get his hand off me, but his powerful wolf gave him an advantage over me.

"Get the hell out of my and my brother's lives," he grumbled, holding my arm and tugging me after him.

"No!" I fought again, trying to grab whatever I could come in contact with, but he would unwrap my fingers from around the source and pull me after him once again. The loud noise from the rain and thunderstorm outside was frightening, and he was going to kick me out.

Once I was outside the mansion and he was dragging me on the front walkway to the white fence gate, I felt the strong wind and goosebumps covered my body.

The night looked scary, with red clouds wrapping the sky like a blanket.

“I am scared of the night, Maddox!” I begged him, but he cold- heartedly shoved me out of the gate and locked it from the inside.

I could still see him, but there was no way I could get inside anymore.

“Now go back to whoever is looking for you because we brothers are not taking care of you.” He didn’t know what he was talking about. I didn’t know who was coming for me; I just knew whoever it was meant harm to me.

“Maddox! Pleas—e don’t leave me out here,” I pleaded through sobs with my hands wrapped around the bars. He didn’t stay to see what condition he had left me in and walked inside the mansion.

Upon turning around, I saw the tall trees staring at me in the dark. Everything seemed alive and angry with me.

“How am I going to survive the night?” My tears choked me as the shattering words escaped my lips. I was petrified of the dark road ahead. Every few seconds, it seemed like something was rushing over to get me.

Frightened of my shadow, I decided to get moving. Standing in one spot and crying will do nothing for me. With that and other countless fears filling my head, I sauntered all the way to the backside of the mansion. The mansion must be some million square feet. There was a lot of space for me in the mansion, but he was so cold-hearted that he just wanted me gone.

From the worrisome day to the night of rejection, I went through all of it alone. I must have walked for hours in order to reach the backside due to the breaks I took for crying and hiding for over twenty minutes whenever I heard a rustle behind me.

Now that I had successfully reached the backside, I sat down. on the bench behind a wooden wall. The backside was much cozier than the front. While hugging my knees and shaking hysterically, I saw what was written on the small wall.

“The noble warriors fought the evil creatures so that werewolves could rule the earth once again,”

I bet it was about their parents. They have fought in a war together. How does one split from their mate, who they have children with?

My head was hurting from the icy wind. It was almost as if something was absorbing the wind inside me, but my human body could not process it. I soon began coughing and sneezing. My eyes felt heavy when they burned. The rain had left me miserable.

I must be getting sick from the cold.

I could no longer fear who was coming to get me because I wasn't even in a state of processing what was happening around me.

My body was tired now and my eyes felt heavy. I slowly leaned over the bench and closed my eyes. I couldn't move a muscle for hours because of how lifeless I felt.

"What the fuck is wrong with you, Maddox?" A loud grunting voice jolted me awake from the half-sleepy state I was in.

I opened my eyes to all the commotion happening around me.

"Beatrice!" I heard somebody calling my name in the distance.

"This is for the best," Maddox yelled at his brothers, whoever was accusing him of making a mistake.

“Beatrice! Where are you?” I recognized the voice to be Zane’s voice, followed by Helel and Akin’s loud voices calling for me.

I wanted to get up and answer them because I needed care at the moment. However, I couldn’t. And then I heard the rumblings grow as Zane began to appear in my sight from a distance.

32-Now is Not The Time

Zane's POV:

It was pretty chilly in the attic, and we hadn't moved away from the screen for hours by now. Sitting in front of thirty screens and our backs facing each other's backs, we kept our eyes peeled to make sure we didn't miss anything. We wouldn't normally do that if it's a regular storm, but as Akin insisted, this is no regular one. We had to be attentive to every single detail.

But I wasn't paying 100% of my attention to it. The thought of Beatrice occupied part of my brain. I tried not to think about her at this particular moment, but I couldn't. Now that the truth has been exposed to my brothers, I wonder what solution they will come up with.

Could it be that we will have to reject her one by one?

I kept my calm until I couldn't take it any longer. I needed to just get out of here for a moment.

"Hey guys," I said, taking off my headphones and waving my hands behind their backs.

“Guys!” scrunching a piece of paper, I aimed it at Helel’s head, and he took off his headphones to look my way.

“It’s getting pretty cold in here. I will go grab a beer really quickly. Do you guys want anything?” I asked him without making eye contact with him.

“Fine. Go get them quick. Get me a protein bar though, and a few bottles of beer for us,” Helel let out a sigh as he fixated his eyes on my screen and spun his attention from one to the other, trying to keep a check on both the walls with screens.

I got up from my seat before Akin could spot me and force me to sit down and rushed out of the attic to downstairs.

‘To be honest, I don’t think she will let me touch her again. after I didn’t defend her and even lied to her,’ I told Zey, who had been silent the whole time.

‘She has no other choice. It’s the desperation in her eyes that makes her vulnerable,’ Zey disagreed with me.

‘I should check up on her and give her a good excuse to make it seem like I had to act tough in front of my others,’ I wasn’t too sure if she would be that desperate to open her room for me again, so I wanted to talk to her and persuade her I did it for some reason.

But I couldn't come up with an excuse good enough until Zey mentioned something.

'Tell her you got jealous of her mates.' His words made me stop in my tracks and a smile appeared on my lips.

'I think that will work,' feeling confident about myself, I sauntered my way to her room when a tap on my shoulder halted my proceeding steps.

"Huh?" I turned to see Maddox frowning at me.

"I thought you told Helel you were getting us beer," His sharp jaw was clenching visibly as he questioned me.

"I'm going to but I decided to check up on her," I said very calmly as if it wasn't a big deal.

"Why? Why would you want to check up on that nuisance?" Maddox's blue eyes were turning darker with every passing second.

Just the mention of her was making him crazy.

"I took your side and not Helel and Akin's. Now that I want to do something my own way, I don't want you to interrupt," I told him, trying to get into her room, but Maddox slammed his hand on the door and stopped me from passing.

“Maddox! Let it go. I will just speak to her and then return to the attic. If we keep wasting time here, our brothers will suspect something is going on downstairs.” I tried to kick some sense out of him. He looked lost for a minute before he sighed and stepped aside.

The moment I entered the room, goosebumps crept over my skin. She was nowhere to be found. It was only then that I realized why Maddox wasn't letting me inside.

“Madd—,” before I could yell to get his attention, he walked inside and hushed me.

“I know what you are freaking out about. She is gone, okay? I took care of her,” he stated coldly and stupidly. It took me a minute to shake my head and comprehend what he was telling me.

“What have you done? What did you do to her?” I groaned angrily, muttering when asking him what a stupid step he took.

“I told you, I took care of her. Rejected her and kicked her out of the house,” the moment he noticed how disappointed I looked in him, his confidence shattered.

“Are you fucking kidding me? Maddox! You didn't get rid of her. You got us all in very serious trouble,” I yelled at him and tried to sprint out of the room but he got a hold of my hand and prevented me from leaving.

“Let me go. Do you want her mother to call here and find out her daughter went missing right under the alpha king’s nose? Do you want that reputation? And let’s see if she called her mother from somewhere and told her what you did to her. What then?” I yelled out all the potential dangers to him, and he realized he screwed up.

“I didn’t think about it,” he whispered, and that’s when he let me go. I ran upstairs and told my brothers what happened. I didn’t want Maddox to get into trouble, but he had left me with no choice.

Helel and Akin didn’t speak to him, but they left their spots and ran downstairs with me. I had never seen Helel and Akin so distressed before as we looked for her.

“I will go check the cameras,” it was then Akin suggested, and we found a ray of hope.

As we waited for him in silence, Akin came back, telling us he saw her walk towards the back side of the mansion. I leaped to my feet and sprinted before any of them. The night was scary enough for her. I wondered what the rain and cold weather must have done to her.

Finally, I spotted her lifelessly resting on the bench.

33-Easily Fooled

Beatrice's POV:

The last thing I remember was Zane walking my way before I passed out completely.

I woke up feeling lightheaded in my bed. The storm seemed to have calmed down, but it was still raining outside.

“You are messing up again,” Helel complained as he tried adjusting the hooks of the curtain and Zane pulled it from the other side.

“I’m not fucking up, Akin is taking his sweet time giving me hooks,” Zane growled, blaming Akin, who I hadn’t seen until he got up from the floor and stood straight.

“Hey! Don’t blame me. I was—oh hey, you woke up,” Akin stopped talking when his eyes landed on me. Everybody else looked my way. Helel jumped off the stool while Zane dropped the curtain to gather around me.

“How are you feeling now?” Helel asked, his eyes doing a quick scan of me as I rubbed my knee.

“I think you hurt it somewhere. I have cleaned the wound for you,” Helel said, pointing at my elbow.

“I think she still has a fever,” Akin stated while getting into bed to only place his hand on my forehead. My body shivered at his touch.

“It’s okay. She will be fine in a few days. We will take care of her,” Helel mumbled.

I was surprised that the brothers were taking care of me instead of yelling at me and asking me how I managed to create a mate bond with them.

“We were trying to put up the curtains so that you don’t have to worry about the light and privacy, but this dumbass—,” Helel slapped Zane’s head and complained, “He wasn’t able to work properly and then kept making noises and woke you up,” he added, and Zane rolled his eyes at his brother.

“Okay! How about we get you something to eat first?” Akin asked, and I nodded absentmindedly.

As the two brothers walked out of the room, I lowered my face to shake my head and wake up, as if I was dreaming. When did they become so nice to me?

“Beatrice!” It was time Zane cleared his throat and walked closer to my bed.

“I know you must be angry at me, but I have a good reason for acting stupidly. I’ll talk to you about it later.” He seemed to be in a rush and ran out of the room like something was chasing him.

“What happened to them?” I asked myself in confusion. It was as if they saw me sick and their attitude toward me changed.

I didn’t mind. I was more than happy that they were so nice to me. A weak smile covered my lips as I stared at the curtain.

I don't know what happened to Maddox, but his thought wiped the smile off my lips. It hurt me so much that he rejected me.

Just when I thought he would be gone, I found him standing outside my room, but the ego and anger that used to be on his face were now gone.

"I didn't think through my actions," he whispered, his hands in his pockets and his face down.

"I know there's no excuse for my behavior, but I was seriously high on something and acted out of my mind," he said, probably expecting me to respond, but I didn't. I was so upset with him that I didn't feel like talking to him at that moment.

"I'll be downstairs with my brothers. Let me know if you need anything," he said, but when he didn't get a response from me, he walked out of my sigh.

I let go of the breath I was holding in after he left. He had actually scared me enough to not mess with him.

After staying in bed for another minute, I began to feel a little weird. The area between my shoulders started to ache a lot, reminding me of that day when I didn't take the medicine and started acting up on the road and Zane had to come to take me home.

“Wait! I didn’t take my pills.” It was only then that I realized I hadn’t taken my pills. That’s why I started feeling weird. Even when it was raining and cold outside, I felt pretty warm inside.

I hesitantly got out of bed and frantically looked for my pills. Once I couldn’t find them in my room, I ran out to look for any of the brothers and asked him for my pills.

I couldn’t understand why they would steal my pills again. What the fuck is wrong with these people? The moment I was heading downstairs and had reached the kitchen, I heard them talk.

“Keep her pills safe. She will need them soon.” It was Akin. So he took away my pills. Why?

I didn’t show up instantly because I wanted to hear what they were talking about.

“But she will look for her pills soon. What then?” It upset me when I heard Helel talking about my pills and knowing that his brother took them away.

“We have to keep the pills away,” Akin responded to Helel’s concerns.

“And what then?” It was Zane who spoke up this time. They were all in the kitchen, talking about me. They hid my pills for whatever reason, and I thought they were being genuinely nice to me.

“We talked about it earlier. But anyway, you guys will one by one reject her,” Akin stated, and my heart dropped in my chest.

“I ready to do it,” Helel didn’t even waste a second before agreeing to reject me. I was stunned by how easy it was for them to reject me.

“I’m fine with it, too,” Zane said, and my jaw almost touched the floor.

“And I thought you guys finally cared.” I couldn’t hold back anymore and came out from behind the wall. They shared a shocked glance before their eyes traveled to my face.

“You are going to reject me?” I asked them, looking at Helel and then at Zane. The fucked up thing was that they didn’t look sad about the fact that they were going to reject their fated mate.

34-I Reject You All

“Calm down, and then we can talk.” Akin gave his coat a little jerk when he came out from behind the counter to talk to me.

“Where are my pills?” I asked, tears forming in my eyes, “You want me to not take the pills so that they can reject me and I feel the pain?” I yelled in tears. It was hard arguing with all of them. None of them was on my side, even when the two of them were still my mates.

“No! That’s not why we’re restraining you from taking your pills,” Akin raised his voice once he didn’t like me questioning his intentions.

“I don’t care what you have to say. If you all hate me so much, I will just excuse myself from here. None of you has to bear my sight anymore.” I was panting and wheezing, my emotions taking over.

“Beatri—,” Helel got off the stool to approach me, but I took a step back from him.

“You all wanted to reject me? Fine, I will do it myself.” I said as I nodded my head, “I will reject you guys and then leave.” I was definitely not in my mind because there was nowhere else I could go. Except, I could call my mom and tell her all about the tortures they have been putting me through. They think of me as a liar anyway, so I will lie to my mother and say that I never felt a mate bond with anyone.

I am sure she will understand, even if I get caught lying. She is my mom, the only person who has always cared for me.

“Okay! That’s enough drama. Go back to your room,” Akin grunted once he decided he didn’t want to listen to me complain anymore.

“No! Let’s get over this rejection thing first,” I said, shaking my head as I refused to go upstairs. I didn’t want anyone; I can ask my mom to protect me.

“I, Beatrice Mintz—,” I started talking, but Akin’s loud grunt silenced me.

“We didn’t want you to feel pain, and we were not being nice to you because we were being sneaky or anything.” The more he raised his voice at me, the angrier he made me. I felt insulted.

“How dare you raise your voice at me?” I felt my body calming down in a weird way. The look on their faces when I stared right into Akin’s eyes, said it all.

“He just wants to tell you that we were not planning anything bad for you,” Zane said, standing beside his brother.

“He doesn’t have to do that. I can make my own decisions,” I grunted, twitching a little as my shoulders hurt.

“I, Beatrice Mintz, reject Alpha King Zane Spade as my mate,” I muttered the rejection, folding my hands into tight fists. Zane watched my face for a moment as tears appeared in his eyes. Obviously, it wasn’t tears of losing his mate, but the pain. of rejection by his wolf felt crept into his eyes in the form of tears.

“I accept your rejection.” The instant he said that, Akin glared at him in complaint.

“No! If she doesn’t care, why would we care? Let her feel the pain. I don’t know why you all were worried that she would be devastated.” Zane shrugged his shoulders and turned to me, probably waiting for me to get on my knees and cry out in pain.

The fact that I didn’t even flinch stunned them.

“You are not feeling anything?” It was Helel this time who tilted his head when trying to examine me.

“No! as a matter of fact, I feel fine,” I whispered to myself in confusion.

“Well, so we are good to go then. Helel! Come on, it is your turn now,” Zane patted his brother’s back to reject me next.

I was a bit baffled as to why I felt nothing. not even a little sadness or pain.

“Fine. I, Alpha King Helel Spade, reject Beatrice Mintz as my mate,” he said and then watched me for a reaction.

“I accept your rejection,” I whispered, only focusing on myself. Why wasn’t I feeling pain?

“How is an omega standing like a brick wall in front of us after getting rejected by not only one mate but three mates?” Zane’s question confused us all even more.

Now that the rejection was done, I stepped back from them. I didn’t feel any physical pain, but it did break my heart that none of my mates cared enough about me to stop me. They didn't even care about losing a fated mate.

"Now! Give me my pills," I started crying again as I demanded they give me my pills back. The pain between my shoulders was slowly running down my spine, and it was getting unbearable

"We cannot," Akin uttered, and my body stiffened.

"You have a high fever, you need to get well before you take those pills," Helel added because I started glaring at his brother like

I was going to eat him alive.

"Give me the damn pills. I can live with the fever, but not with —ahh! This pain." I hugged myself, biting my inner cheeks and groaning.

"The pills make your recovery process slower, and it is not good for the human body. You need to calm your wolf down until your fever goes away. That's why we didn't want to give you those pills. And we were being nice to you so that we don't hurt your wolf or trigger her while you are not on the pills," Akin shouted at me as if it made any sense.

"You were going to reject me while I was not on the pills," I screamed back at him, and silence hit him.

He narrowed his eyes in my face, his breathing turning irregular.

“Get her out of my sight before I lose my temper.” He closed his eyes and waved his hand at me.

“I said, get her out of my sight.” Now that he had opened his eyes, I saw the color change and almost let out a gasp. His wolf was urging him to take over.

35-Mates Again!

Before he could let his wolf take over, I rushed upstairs in tears while yelling some really interesting things at the brothers that I couldn't even realize at that time.

"I don't need anyone to keep me safe any more. I don't even want to live like that." I stormed inside my room and locked the door. Dropping to my knees, I started wailing loudly while feeling something wet run down my back and dampen my shirt.

"UGHH!" I groaned, scratching my arms to alleviate the pain.

"What is going on? Why do I feel this pain?" I was muttering to myself. My wolf didn't even speak up this time. I was in a state where I felt like I would pass out, but I didn't. How do I stop this pain?

That's when somebody started banging on the door.

"Beatrice! Why did you lock the door?" It was Helel. He was trying to get into the room.

"What do you want now?" I yelled, realizing I had rejected all my alpha king mates. What now? I am left with Flynn, whom I don't want, and I am sure he doesn't want me either anymore.

"Just open the door first," he yelled.

“No!” I screamed as I squirmed on the floor, noticing how dry my mouth was beginning to get. The room was pretty hot. I needed an icy wind to touch my skin. I got up on my feet and rushed over to the window, opening it wide and letting the icy breeze cover my skin.

“You are on your medications, and your wolf is triggered right now. Just open the door, please!” He didn’t sound like he was coming to hurt me or my feelings. He told me in simple words that he was trying to help me.

“Beatrice! I am a trainer; I can help you control your wolf to some extent. Just open the door, please?” I bet the pause he took was to calm himself down first in order to calm me down.

I was feeling a lot of pain, so it was worth a shot to let him help me. Now that I was not going crazy, I remembered why I needed to hide my scent.

Taking slow strides toward the door, I opened it and stepped aside instantly. My back met the wall when he rushed inside and stared at me.

“You didn’t hurt yourself, did you?” he asked, bending over to scan me from head to toe and then watching me shake my head.

“And why the heck is that window open?” He then ambled towards the window and closed it again. Helel closed the bedroom door and stood a few feet away from me before he walked my way and stood face-to-face with me.

“I know you are angry at me for the whole rejection thing. But trust me, I don’t feel anything for you. Do you really want to be mated to someone who doesn’t even see you in that light?” He started talking, and his words only hurt me. That was the problem. I couldn’t understand why they were so reluctant to feel anything for their fated mate.

“Is it because my mom introduced us as step-siblings?” I asked in a muffled tone. In response to my question, he nodded.

“First thing first, let’s help you calm down.” He said that and pulled his hand out for me to hold it. I stared at his hand and then held it gently.

“Sit here.” He walked me over to the bed and sat me down.

“I don’t know what we can do in this situation, but I have a simple solution for now. I am going to inject some silver and wolfbane into your body.” The moment I heard that I started shaking my head and pulling away from him in the bed.

“Just a very little amount,” he instantly added. I have heard them give prisoners a heavy dosage of that mixture, and the way they would cry and scream in pain frightened me for life. I would not want to feel that sort of pain.

“But that won’t hide my scent,” I uttered.

“We will think about that later. As for now, we have to make sure you don’t go into transition, okay?” He said this, bringing out a little bottle with a mixture of silver and wolfbane in it.

“It will burn a bit, but I am here to calm you down,” he said. One could tell he was a professional warrior and trainer. He held the dropper over my lips, and I stretched my neck back. A few drops slipped onto my tongue and then down my throat.

“AHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH!” The instant burn seemed to have killed me.

“Ehhh!” I began to wheeze the moment it went inside me. Helel crawled into the bed and held my arm to lay me down while I squirmed in pain.

“Look at me,” He cupped my face in his hands and bent over me, saying, “It is just a few drops. Your wolf is angry because we took away her only chance of getting out. She is slowly going to sleep, so focus on anything but herself. You don’t want her to hold on to you and stay awake for another few hours.” He said, his hands warming my cheeks, as I no longer felt hot.

“Bhuuut it hhhurts,” my tongue felt heavy when talking.

“It will be for a few minutes. Let’s focus on something else. Tell me what you want to focus on?”

He asked, paying full attention and probably being extremely worried for me.

If anything happens to me because of this mixture, he will get blamed for it. While he waited for my answer, I noticed how beautiful his blue eyes were.

“You!” I said, and the frown on his forehead unfolded.

“You want to focus on me?” He asked in bewilderment. He sounded like even he didn’t believe I would want to focus on him.

I nodded, finally not feeling the same burning sensation inside me as my wolf was beginning to fall asleep.

But before she did that, she made sure she gave us an enormous shock in our lives when we heard,

‘Mates!’

Again!

36-Cannot Escape Me

“How,” Helel pulled away from me and jumped out of the bed once it was certain that my wolf had fallen asleep.

“Maybe she was angry and said it just to piss me off?” I got up in bed, making up explanations for how it was possible.

“It’s not how it works. Besides, my wolf felt it too,” he said, as he walked around the room, running a hand through his silky hair, and mumbling all the possibilities to himself.

“But you just rejected me. How could it be possible?” I whispered. Even I was at a loss for words.

“What if—,” he paused, stopping in his tracks too, “We need to see if you can still feel the mate bond with the others too,” Helel announced it but didn’t wait around. He hadn’t even looked my way after feeling the mate bond with me. It was probably the reality setting close to him.

The reality is that he cannot escape me.

Obviously, I was a bit lost too, but nothing too crazy. I needed the Alpha Kings to be my mates.

I sat down and waited for him to bring the others inside. Akin wasn’t around, so I’m assuming he was upset with me for raising my voice at him and doubting his intentions.

“But how is it possible?” Zane walked in first, and the others followed him.

“Is your wolf awake?” Zane stopped in front of me and asked me. All I had to do was just shake my head at him.

“But why?” Maddox had the same expression of exhaustion. on his face as before when he found out we were mates.

“I don’t know. I’m calling Akin because this ain’t it,” Helel mumbled, dialing Akin’s phone.

“Do you know what it means?” Maddox looked at Zane and asked him.

“That we are stuck with her,” he added until his eyes landed on my face, “I’m not blaming you, but it’s a fucked up situation since you are—,” he was about to ramble the same thing when I said it.

“It’s okay. Of all you brothers, you are the last one I want to be mated to.” The instant I said that, I saw Zane bite his tongue and step away from Maddox.

“Excuse me?” The look on Maddox’s face comforted me.

“Everybody has a certain type. You are not my type, and I’m not yours.” I added it just so that he doesn’t think I’m instigating him when, in reality, I was.

Maddox lowered his face and sighed with his hands on his face. It was almost like a sigh of disbelief.

“Let’s not argue,” Zane mumbled, gently patting his brother’s back.

“As for you, why did you lie to me when you said Maddox told you about us?” I wasn’t going to spare Zane for lying to everyone and making me look bad. His face turned dark when he heard me questioning him.

“I never told you anything,” Maddox slightly turned to Zane, who rolled his eyes and turned his face to the side. It was then that Maddox shook his head at his own stupidity for believing his brother and walked out of the room. I bet he was feeling like a fool after hearing he wasn't my type, either. I knew for a fact that their egos were big. So he was definitely going to come around to speak to me again, just to check if I really didn't find him attractive.

As for Zane, I lowered my gaze in anger because I didn't want to hide the truth that the entire argument from the night was caused by him.

"Fine! Give me that look. But I only did it because I was—," he paused for a moment and then added, "Jealous!"

The instant I heard that word, my heartbeat rose in my chest.

"Jealous of what?" I asked, my eyes watching him frown in anger.

"Of thinking about you and my brothers," his statement left me appalled. He waited for not even a second before sprinting out of the room after his brothers.

I felt a little different than before about him.

"He was jealous," I said, and a smile appeared on my lips at the thought of him being jealous. This would be the first time any of my mates were jealous about the idea of seeing me with someone else.

My entire mood changed. I badly wanted my wolf to wake up and tell me if I was still mates with him or not.

Since Helel never walked back again, I decided to go outside and see what was going on.

I went out and found them in the living room. I thought Helel would bring Akin to my room, but from the looks of Akin's frown, I could tell he didn't want to see me.

My entry into the living room turned the mood darker. Akin raised his brow but kept his face toward his brother.

"Does that mean we cannot reject her?" Helel asked, probably after telling him the whole story.

"That's impossible. It has not happened before," Akin told Helel, making sure he didn't even pass me a single glance when I came and sat down with them.

"But then explain the mate bond I felt with her again," Helel added, and Akin went silent.

"Maybe we need to do some experimenting," Akin suggested after thinking for a few minutes.

"What sort of experimenting?" It was I who interrupted him this time.

I saw his jaw clench as he gave me his side profile and finally turned to look at me.

“When the wolfbane runs out of your system, we will need to see if your wolf feels the mate bond with Maddox and Zane,” he informed with a pissed-off look on his face.

“And you too!” It was at this moment that Maddox’s words silenced him.

“What? She is not my mate,” Akin didn’t waste a single minute before saying that.

“But it makes sense. She is mated to the three of us. What makes you think you are not her mate?”

Maddox shrugged while Akin looked lost or maybe petrified.

“Le—,” Akin was probably ready to reject the idea when the door opened and a familiar voice stopped him from talking.

“Beatrice! My daughter,” mom called for me while rushing around in search of me.

37-Her Worst Fears

“Mom?” I frowned, watching others grimace and get up from their seats.

Following my voice, mom sprinted towards the living room with Lord Vasquez behind her.

I was in shock for a minute before I landed on my feet and rushed to hug her.

“My Beatrice!” Mom’s arms made me feel secure. I kept my arms tied around her for a moment before we parted, and she cupped my face to stare into my eyes.

“Oh! You have a fever,” she said, a frown appeared on her face when she cupped my face and realized how hot my skin was.

“Why is she sick?” She let go of me and turned around to look at the brothers, who looked upset at the sight of her.

Lord Vasquez was in the process of meeting his sons when mom called for their attention, and they all turned to her.

“She—,” Akin cleared his throat because his father was staring at him for answers.

“I was out in the rain,” I interrupted him and told my mom how I got sick. She took a quick glance at the brothers and then focused on me.

“Why?” as she asked, I saw the brothers sneakily looking around. Maddox lowered his face like a culprit while the others were scratching their necks and chins and focusing on the surroundings. I bet they were worried I was going to expose what Maddox did to me.

“I wanted to enjoy the rain,” I lied, and finally, they all looked like they had found peace.

“Oh! But why would you do that? Don’t you know you are sensitive and catch cold quickly?” Mom held my hand tightly to rub it between her palms while smiling sweetly at me.

“Your mother was so restless that she made me pack our bags and leave the moment she heard about the natural disasters,”

Lord Vasquez laughed at my mom for making them leave over a storm.

“I couldn’t stop thinking about her. And now I know why, because she was sick,” mom gently caressed my cheeks and then held my hand to take me upstairs with her.

“I will spend some time with my daughter,” she said from the stairs while making me walk behind her. We marched into the room, and before we could catch up, she paused to stare at the curtains lying on the floor.

“What was going on here? Who brought these curtains?” The look on her face was terrifying.

“Oh! The brothers did. They were so nice, fixing the curtains. when I woke up,” I smiled as I jumped into the bed like a free girl. I didn’t have to be afraid of anything now that I had my mother with me.

The brothers were obviously afraid of losing the crown.

“They were in your room when you were sleeping?”

Mom didn’t smile back at me. In fact, she looked somewhat hysterical, as if her biggest fears had come to life.

“It was because I passed o—,” I was about to finish when her eyes landed behind me, and my eyebrows twitched in confusion. I couldn’t understand her sudden change of mood.

“What is this?” the panic in her voice, when she grabbed my hand and pulled me out of bed, made me hug myself and steer out of her way.

“What is this, Beatrice?” she yelled as she grabbed the sheet and showed it to me.

“Its blood,” I responded, and just as I was about to touch my shoulder and turn around to show her where it was dripping from, she got closer and slapped me.

“Ahhh!” Her hit was so strong that she knocked me down without an effort.

“What have you done?” she screamed in terror, grasping my face in her hand and digging her nails into my cheeks.

I was staring into her eyes, where I could no longer see love for myself. She was breathing on my face while holding me tightly.

“If that’s what you wanted to do, then you should have told me. I would have just handed you over to that nymphomaniac,” she finally let me go but pushed my face back, and I almost hit my head.

The reasons behind her anger flew over my head. I didn’t understand how my blood could get her this angry.

“But I didn’t hurt my—self, it just happened out of the blue.” Breathing with difficulty, I mumbled the words and turned my back to her. I was really upset at the way she hit me, but if I didn’t tell her the truth instantly, she would get madder.

She was walking back and forth when my words stole her attention. She looked my way and focused on my back.

“You didn’t—,” she paused, and I helped her understand.

“I didn’t hurt myself, and neither did anybody else hurt me,” I said, and she zoned out for a moment before reaching me.

“Pull your shirt up,” she knelt down and did it herself without even waiting for me to listen to her command.

“You— you didn’t take your pills?” Another shocker hit when her voice stuttered.

I knew instantly that I was getting slapped again.

“I was sick, and Akin decided that I should heal first.” I yammered in haste and crawled away from her.

“Who is Akin to make any decisions for you?” She frowned, getting on her feet and grabbing my hand to drag me up. I didn’t like where this was going.

“He—,” I was trying to talk, but she was dragging me out of the room to take me to the living room and probably tell Lord

Vasquez something obnoxious about his sons.

“Who took her pills?” She slammed the living room door open and walked inside, pushing me towards the wall and coming in front of me.

“What happened? Why do you look so upset?” Lord Vasquez jumped to his feet to ask my mom, who was so angry that she was shaking.

“Your sons took away her pills and made her suffer through agonizing pain.” Even her voice sounded heavy when accusing the brothers. They stared at each other because they knew they didn’t do it to cause me pain.

At least not this time.

38-I Am Not Perfect

There was an awkward silence for a moment before Lord Vasquez got out of the chair and stared at my mom in silence.

He then turned around to his sons and nodded his head. I was afraid of what was going to happen now.

“Scarlet!” He kept a smile on his lips when talking to my mom, “They told me everything and why it is needed that we don’t give her these medicines for now. They are not being rude or ruthless toward her. She needs to heal before she takes those medicines again,” he was very calm with my mom.

“I get it. But you don’t understand. The wolfbane cannot hide her scent. So she needs to take those medicines or else—” She paused just in time, but I got the idea of what fear was taking over her.

“Oh, my lovely Scarlet,” the instant Lord Vasquez walked up to my mom and hugged her, the brothers turned their faces away from the sight. I have never had a dad, so I couldn’t understand their feelings.

“She is a stepsister of alpha kings now. She doesn’t need to be afraid of anything. Let her wolf come out; we will deal with the madness,” the suggestion shook my body, and hugged me, digging nails into my arms.

“No!” Mom instantly broke the hug and shook her head at the idea. I knew she would never be on board, and neither would I be. I didn’t want to take any risks.

“Okay, calm down first,” Lord Vasquez mumbled and wrapped his one arm around her while turning to look at his sons.

“Who has her pills?” he asked.

“I have.” Akin tilted his head when answering and folded his arms to show he was going to budge.

“Akin! Give her the pill bottle. If her mother is not accepting your help, then respect her decision,” he was calm today. I bet the long stay alone with my mom worked. She had him wrapped around her finger.

“Didn’t you just say we were her stepbrothers? Then what makes you think we don’t have a say in her health issues?” Akin impressed me with how stubborn he was. I was silently watching his face in disbelief.

“Akin!” Lord Vasquez clenched his jaw, slowly calming himself down to talk to him.

“Dad! Brother is right. If she takes the medicine now, she will grow weak. Don’t you see how miserable she is? It is because of those pills.” Helel stepped ahead to state his concern this time. I watched myself in the reflection of the glass door and frowned at his words.

I am not that weak.

“That is a lie. The medicines are to make sure her wolf stays sleeping,” mom said, raising her face from Lord Vasquez’s chest to raise her voice. “Wolfbane can never do half of the job these pills do,” she added.

“These pills comprise some highly potent sedatives and chemicals that haven’t been used in ages. Why the hell would you feed her that?” Helel, being a trainer and a guru of all sorts of herbs, spoke up.

“I can back that one up. One of the ingredients here is one to which I was once addicted to once. Mainly because it made me see heaven,” It was Maddox who stepped forward this time. I was shocked at how freely he spoke about his addiction in front of his father, who was gritting his teeth at him.

But then i thought of what they were saying. Were those medicines really that strong?

“You guys have no idea what you are talking about right now. The moment she transitions; you all will agree with me that her wolf needs to stay sleeping.” Mom’s voice broke this time. I stepped ahead and saw the terror in her eyes when talking about my wolf.

“Then tell us about her wolf,” Akin demanded. I noticed the only one silently sitting back against the couch was Zane. He was just observing everything.

“All you need to know is that- her wolf has evil instincts.” Those words made my mom lower her face and hide her face from me.

“Evil? How so?” Maddox questioned me with a frown on his face after he examined me.

“She is more inclined to be an evil she-wolf than just your regular one. Her wolf is outrageous, she loves tension and bl- ood,” she finished, and everybody looked shocked. I just couldn’t really think of anything because they were talking about me right when I was in their sight.

“Hm!” Lord Vasquez looked my way and scrunched his nose. I have heard a little bit about him. He hates imperfection.

"Hm!" Lord Vasquez looked my way and scrunched his nose. I have heard a little bit about him. He hates imperfection.

"That's unfortunate," Lord Vasquez mumbled, "I don't understand why we left her with my sons." It was then that his statement turned everyone's attention to him.

"Because where else would she live?" Mom now understood that she had said a lot. But it is not like she was given a choice.

They kind of forced her to tell my secrets.

"If she is evil, she shouldn't be around my sons.

They are the next in line after the Alpha Kings. That is so irresponsible of us." He was shaking his head and passing me nasty glares as if I were some miscreant living in his home.

"Come on, Dad. You really think we cannot handle a she-wolf?" It was Helel who objected, "That is so wrong." He seemed upset with his father's words. Maybe it was just the fact that his father questioned their ability to take care of a she-wolf like me.

“Fine. Then if you think she is not good enough to stay with you all, then I will just take her away from here.” My mom turned over to me and held my hand to leave. I was shocked at the events playing out against us.

“Wait! How can you leave?” Lord Vasquez’s prideful stance was shattered when he watched my mother prepare to leave him for me.

“I will not stay where my daughter cannot stay. I thought you would be like a father to her, and she told me you would be. But it seems like you have changed your mind, so we will leave now,” my mother said as she walked past him while holding my hand, and soon we were in my room packing our bags. I was still in shock at the turn of events.

39-Cannot Lose My Virginity

“I loved this place. Are we really leaving?” I asked my mom, watching her clumsily pack our bags.

“Not really. If one thing I have learned about Vasquez, it is that he will never let me leave him.”

She smirked while not really putting much effort into taking my clothes off the hangers. I now understood why she was delaying so much. She was waiting for him to apologize to her and beg her to stay with him. While she talked about it, we heard a knock on the door.

“Scar! Baby, open the door,” he commanded from the other side of the door. Mom turned to me and then smiled, getting on her feet and walking over to the door to attend it. She left the room to have a word with him. I had been in a very busy routine since morning, so my throat started to give up on me. Since I had a fever too, I thought I should grab something to drink. Obviously, I now knew my mom and I were not going anywhere, so I had calmed down. After reaching the kitchen, I started looking for anything to eat and drink.

“Let me help you with that,” I heard Maddox say from behind me when I grabbed a soda bottle and couldn’t undo the cork. He took the bottle out of my hands, opened it with his bare hands, and offered it back to me.

“Thank you,” I answered, taking a little sip like a scared kitten. The only reason for me to be afraid of him was his intense stare.

He was hunching over the counter beside me and staring into my soul.

“You guys are not leaving?” he inquired, and I almost spat the drink out.

“No!” I answered, holding the bottle between both my hands and taking little sips.

“You must be disappointed,” I commented, and I watched him lower his face and laugh a little at my statement.

“Don’t act like you know me,” he then raised his face, and there was no residue of any smile from before, “What happened there?” he frowned and walked over to the other side just so that we are standing face to face with a counter between us.

“What?” I asked.

He gently pushed my hair back and ran his finger over my cheek. I pulled away from him because I still remembered how agonizing his hatred made me feel.

“This!” he whispered.

I didn’t even realize my mother had left a bruise on my cheek until he mentioned it.

“My mom got really upset when she thought I had hurt myself by being reckless,” I answered, continuing to drink.

“Hurt yourself?” he frowned.

“Uh-huh,” I nodded. “She saw the blood from my back on the sheets and thought maybe I was being reckless,” I explained. His stare turned intense for a moment before he cocked his face and deepened his eyes into mine.

“She thought you lost your virginity?” As soon as he asked that, I spat the drink out finally.

“Wh—,” I started coughing and fighting to catch my breath, “No! my mother only hits me when she thinks I hurt myself or put myself in danger.” I corrected him. I mean, I knew how one bleeds when they lose their virginity, but I never really thought about it until my mom saw the sheets.

“Beatrice! Don’t be too dumb. Why would she hit you if you had hurt yourself or were in danger? She hit you because she thought she lost control over you.” He was saying things that made no sense to me.

“That is not how my mom treats me. She cares for me. Yes! She doesn’t want me to sleep around because boys are mad. But she will never hit me for it.” I shook my head confidently at him and grabbed the bottle again.

“The bruise on your face. How can you be so chill about it? Does it not hurt?” He was clenching his perfectly shaped jaw while looking at my bruise.

“That is sweet coming from someone who was so aggressively pushing me around, yanking my hair, and also kicking me out in the middle of the night of a terrible storm. I appreciate the change. I guess the rejection was a good idea after all.” I said it all in one breath before taking a bigger sip this time.

He stared at my face for a minute before he smiled.

“It is not funny. Abusing someone and being rude to them,” I didn’t like how he was smiling as if he did a very great job.

“I am not smiling because of that. I am smiling because—,” he paused to take a deep breath, “because you are cute,” he whispered those words, and I forgot to gulp the drink down my throat. For a moment, I kept the liquid in my mouth. My cheeks pumped like chipmunks as I stared into his beautiful eyes.

“I was heavily drugged up that night. I wish I hadn’t, but I don’t have a time machine to go back in time and fix it. However, it is true that I was creeped out about the idea of having a stepsister for a mate.” He nodded as he agreed with himself.

“So, are you going to be angry at me again if we feel the mate bond?” I asked, and the corner of his lip stretched upward.

“If that happens again, then it means it is meant to be.” My heart skipped a beat when he surrendered like that.

“But I have a question for you,” his smirk grew wider as his words turned into a whisper, “Would you be able to handle four dicks? I mean, we are alpha kings. We are needy, and highly sexually demanding. Of course, we will not force you, but what about you? Wouldn't you want to taste your mates every day?" The more he talked about sex and the private body part that he so nonchalantly talked about, the more I began to feel terrified.

"I —," I could no longer drink any more.

"Hm! Think about it," he said as he walked over to the fridge, grabbed a bottle of beer, and left for his room.

40-He Wants To Sleep Around

My mom had agreed upon staying and even told Lord Vasquez to say nothing hurtful to me ever again. He came to my room and told me he had just panicked because of the way his mother talked about my wolf. She convinced them that if I continue taking my pills, I will be fine.

Lord Vasquez planned the family dinner to cheer up my mom after he had upset her with his words for me. I got my pills, and

Mom made sure I ate them. Although she made it clear why I shouldn't be missing my pills, I still wanted to miss a day and see if I could feel the mate bond with the brothers again.

More specifically, to see if I missed Akin last time.

Just the thought of him being my mate made me shut my legs shyly. I was called into the dining room after everything was served. Wearing a blue hoodie and white skirt, I wandered around until the brothers came. I was a bit shocked to see what my mother was wearing.

She had a strapless red dress on. The cleavage was so low that it could barely cover my mom's big boobs. They were just hanging out and jiggling every time she moved. The dress was also tiny from the bottom. The only reason I could think of as to why she wore that dress was to maybe impress Lord Vasquez until I began to notice the weird things she was doing.

“Helel! What do you always eat with those salads?” Mom got up from her seat with a pasta bowl and reached for him.

“It is a part of my diet plan,” he answered, not really paying too much attention to her.

“Come on, eat some of this. I made this for you all.”

She stood beside him and started filling his plate with pasta, and that’s when I noticed how he was scrunching his nose and frowning, trying to pull away from her. I realized it was because, while filling his bowl, her entire chest was getting rubbed against his arm, and no matter how hard he tried to pull away from her, she would get closer to him.

I felt so awkward about what my mom was doing.

“That will be enough,” he finally spoke up and shook his head angrily before he raised his face and glared at me. I don’t understand how anything my mom does makes them angry at me? Is it because they think we are in this together?

I had to lower my eyes to escape his angry glare. “I have been thinking of working out, but I couldn’t find a better instructor there. Now that I am here for three days, I was thinking, why not have Helel help me with my posture and everything?” She sat down with Lord Vasquez and babbled. I wondered if she didn’t notice how uncomfortable she was making him by talking like that.

“That is a wonderful idea,” Vasquez cheered, “I would love to see my son bond with his new mother.” He didn’t understand my mother’s intentions, but I swear Helel was getting angrier.

“I would love to, but I am busy the next few days. Maybe when you come back again, we can give it a shot,” Helel excused himself without even finishing his dinner and got out of his chair to leave. “I have to be somewhere; excuse me!” he said and rushed out of the living room.

I couldn’t feel like eating anymore either. I noticed the brothers talking with their eyes. I bet they noticed everything Mom did to make Helel leave.

Why?

After the dinner ended, I sneaked out of the living room when mom and lord Vasquez decided to take care of the dishes and do the dirty work on the kitchen counter. I know this because the instant I walked out; I heard them smooching.

Climbing the stairs, I reached my desired destination for the night. I wanted to speak to Helel and apologize to him for my mom's behavior.

I didn't have to knock on the door because he had left it ajar for anyone to come in. However, I did clear my throat to get his attention.

"What?" he asked, giving me his back and packing his bag.

"Are you leaving for somewhere?" I couldn't stand outside the room anymore when I saw him packing his stuff.

"That's none of your business," he said, only taking a few clothes and some stuff.

"But I feel like it is because of my mom," I whispered, watching him aggressively shove his toothbrush into the bag.

"It is not okay. I mean, yeah! She gave me an idea of what kind of woman she is, but that's not why I am leaving. In fact, I am not even leaving. I will be back in a few days,” he corrected himself after he realized he was coming off wrong.

“Then why are you leaving, and where are you going to stay?” I asked in a little utterance, keeping my tone down and soft.

“There is someone who needs my help,” he answered, but didn’t look my way. I could be wrong, but it seemed like he was trying to steal his eyes from me.

“Who?” I wasn’t uttering anything anymore, and even he turned his neck in my direction to stare at me. “Is it that girl, Gwen Moore?” I asked, and the frown growing on his forehead confirmed my suspicion.

“Why do you have her name in your mouth?” He almost sounded so threatening when asking about her name.

“You are going to stay with her, aren’t you?” I was not afraid of him, but I was jealous of her. I have heard him say her name and show concern for her way too many times to avoid the topic.

“Why the heck do you think you can ask me anything?” He let out a little scoff, or more like laughed at me in disbelief.

“Because I am your mate. In fact, a fated one that you cannot even reject.” I heard the confidence in my tone, but it was the look on his face that stole the show.
