“Maddox!” I whispered, watching him smirk only a little, making my heart flutter. He didn’t say a word but kept walking my way.

With his every step toward me, I took two steps back. I entered the dark living room like he wanted me to.

So I was right!

He wanted more of me, just like I did. He pushed me onto the couch and knelt down between my legs.

The way his strong hands pulled my PJs down and left me only in my panties, I felt my heart rushing to my cheeks.

He buried his face between my legs while running his hands over my thighs. I felt him breathe on my vagina before he started kissing it wildly. I gasped, breathing hard in shock. I didn't expect him to go this crazy. But I guess he was turned on by the sexual tension from earlier. I lowered my face to watch him draw his head back and scan my p*ssy from over the panties.

I moan as he gently fingers my p*ssy through my panties. He lowered his face again just so that he could lick my p*ssy and make me go crazy. He pulled my panties to one side with his fingers. He fingered my slit, and then gently dipped his finger into me.

"Ah!" I gasped in shock and rose on my elbows, resting down again when I realized he wasn't stopping.

He then put a c*shion under my booty to raise my body up, and then he played with my slit. I spread my legs unconsciously when he spread my split and stuck his tongue

$1-Tonque F*cked inside me.

I squirmed hard when he kept tonguing me. My toes curled every time his tongue pleased me.

He started to eat me down there aggressively, making me reach the end. I was moving around while his tongue licked my p*ssy and slit vigorously.

I was breathing heavily from my gaping mouth while he adjusted again in my knees but this time, I felt something big and hard rub against my c*it. I opened my eyes to see him guiding his ck's head to my vagina. He was rubbing it all over my psy and around my cl*t, making me go crazy. I stared at him in bewilderment-was he really going to take my virginity in such an uncomfortable position?

I knew his intentions, and even though I was enjoying every bit of his touch and the sexual pleasure he was giving me, I just felt like it wasn't the right time.

"No! I don't want to do that." I closed my legs and rolled to the side, wearing my panties and then pulling over my PJs. He was too shocked to speak.

"Mom is up there, and she knows I am not in the room. What if she gets up to look for me?" I said it in a panicked tone. He pulled his shorts up and got on his feet to respond to my fear.

"She is probably sleeping deeply. We have been here for an hour; did she come or not? what makes you think she will come now?” He obviously didn’t sound very happy. But I had a valid reason to not do it right now.

My heart was pounding hard as if something bad was going to happen in the next few minutes. I just couldn’t tell why I was feeling that way, but that feeling was strong.

51-Tongue Fked

“I don’t know. I feel li—,” I had only said half of the sentence when my fear came to life.

“Beatrice?” My mom’s voice came from the staircase, and my jaw met the floor. I knew I was not freaking out over nothing.

“Mom is here!” I grabbed my hair in my fists and gasped. He looked around and then ran over to the couch, squatting behind it.

“Okay! I need to calm down,” I convinced myself before reaching the exit of the living room and finding my mom there. She was about to walk inside when she caught me leaving.

“Why are you in the living room?” She had a visible frown on her forehead when asking me that question.

“I was tired, so I sat in there for a few minutes.” I lied, still breathing loudly.

“Really?” she said, pushing me aside and walking into the living room to inspect around. My heart drowned in my stomach, wondering if she was going to catch him.

“Ah!” I screamed in pain to get her attention. She turned around and looked my way, frowning at me.

“What happened?” she asked, and I wrapped my arm around my stomach, bending over for her to chase me and help me with my posture.

“What is going on?” she inquired. “Are you okay? It must be from eating at odd hours of the night,” she said, holding my hand to support me on my feet and walk me upstairs.

“Maybe,” I uttered, sneakily turning my head around to pass the last glance at Maddox. I don’t know what was going on with my body, but I was excited to be touched by my mates. For now, Maddox had mesmerized me with his hot, sizzling body. I wanted more from him, but the fear of getting caught stopped me from losing my virginity tonight. Mom tucked me in the bed, and this time I knew I just had to go to sleep.

I was still wondering what would have happened if she hadn’t arrived. He was going to f*ck me? Maybe he has finally accepted the fact that we are mates, and he is going to accept me and mark me soon?

Wow! Life was never so full of positivity and fun. I was now looking forward to being alone with him again.

Which is not what happened the next day. I woke up two hours late to learn from Lord Vasquez that Maddox had left to stay with his mother for a few days.

It was something I didn't expect him to do. Especially after everything that had happened between us. I wondered why he left this time.

“Beatrice! Why aren’t you eating your breakfast?”

Mom growled, pushing the plate near me once again. My energy went down after I heard about Maddox’s departure. It opened doors for many questions and fears of mine. What if he didn’t like doing anything with me? But that can’t be it, or else he would not have asked me to come to meet him in the living room. What about him wanting to f*ck me? Could it be that he got upset because I didn’t let him do it after getting pleasure from him twice? But that can’t be it, because my mother did arrive when I said I could feel her nearby.

We were lucky that I stopped him, or else I wouldn’t be sitting here, getting forced to eat.

“Zane! You have a Halloween party at school?” Lord Vasquez’s mention of him made me lift my face and watch Zane enter the room to feast with us. He was wearing a white shirt and looking devilishly handsome.

“Yeah! Because the majority of the students had been traumatized by the earthquake, the school decided to throw a Halloween party for us in the open air.” Zane answered, picking up a piece of toast and buttering it nicely.

“Is it tonight?” Vasquez asked, and he nodded, filling himself with a glass of juice and taking a huge sip out of it. He hadn’t spared me a glance so far.

“Why don’t you take Beatrice with you?” As soon as Vasquez suggested that, Zane spat out the drink and coughed.

“What?” he asked his father through coughs.

“Calm down. Why are you rushing? It is not like it is going to run away from you,” Vasquez probably didn’t get why his son reacted so aggressively.

“Dad! I cannot take her with me.” He continued to complain, watching Mrs. Brown clean the table and give him a napkin to clean his white shirt.

“Why not? Your brother took her to his personal party. This is the school’s one. You are only giving her a ride,” Vasquez argued with Zane, who finally looked my way and then stared at his father.

“Brother took her to his friend’s Halloween party?” Zane asked, and when his father nodded at him, he whispered, “Interesting!”

“So, take her with you,” Vasquez ordered, and she didn’t object this time. I wasn’t feeling like eating anything anyway, so I excused myself and walked out of the mansion to roam around the gardens for fresh air.

“He should have at least messaged me or let me know why he was leaving,” I was talking to myself while holding my phone in my hands and brainstorming any reason I could find to help myself not feel dumped.

“Maybe I should text him,” I decided, typing a quick text for him.

Me: Hey. I heard from my mom that you left. Is everything okay?

I was biting my nails when I stared at the screen. He didn’t read my message, so I assumed he was away.

“Texting who?” I heard Zane call from beside me. He was hunching over the white statue in the garden.

“The school has a party?” I asked, deliberately averting his attention.

“Yes! Do you have a costume?” he asked, and I bobbed my head at him. He was watching me with his beautiful, intense eyes.

“Maddox took you out?” I knew he would ask me that. There was a little smirk on his lips as if he was already thinking something crazy had happened.

“Yeah,” I faintly nodded, making it seem less important.

“And you guys caught the bad guys,” he asked again, itching the corner of his eye but sounding hella sketchy.

“He did,” I corrected him, trying to avoid talking about last night.

“What else?” he asked, and my body got covered in goosebumps.

“Nothing. Then we returned home.” I had to look away from him when answering him because his eyes seemed to inspect me.

“So, what costume are you wearing tonight for the party?” His questions were pretty normal-sounding, but the way he would raise his brow every time he finished asking me something got to me.

He was definitely not believing me when I said nothing else happened.

“A corpse bride costume,” I answered agitatedly, “Flynn will be there?” I asked him before he could ask me any more questions.

“I don’t know. If you are this desperate to know, I can text him and get an answer for you.” He said it in such a way that I got the impression he didn’t want me talking about Flynn.

“He is your friend; how do you not know?” I asked instead of shutting up. I wasn’t interested in knowing whether Flynn was coming or not. I just wanted to get him off track and focus on something else.

“Hm! Beatrice!” Zane said my name in a husky voice, “Are you hiding something from me?” He smiled almost so innocently that one could not predict if he was being sarcastic or if he genuinely thought I was being secretive.

“No! What would I hide from you?” I answered him, letting out a nervous laugh and stealing his eyes.

“Exactly. We are mates. You are not supposed to hide anything from me,” he said, and when I watched his face, he gave me a shrug.

“So you don’t think I am your stepsister?” I asked out of curiosity.

“No! My dad is never marrying your mom. Besides, I am sure we are mates again and that we brothers cannot reject you,” he stated confidently.

“I will still like to confirm,” I argued.

“Hm! So! The corpse bride costume, huh?” He walked over 52 Hard To Strip?

11 288 Vouchers from behind the statue to stand in front of me. He was so tall that I had to lift my face pretty high in order to look him in the eye.

“Yeah,” I answered.

“Is it hard to take it off?” He tilted his head, his eyes watching my face like a hungry beast and then traveling down to the valley of my breasts. I was wearing a white top. The cleavage wasn’t strong, but it was too tight on my boobs, giving out the impression of my breasts.

“I think my mom is looking for me.” His question made me feel a little weird, so I excused myself and ran inside the mansion again.

“Quickly, get ready,” Mom said, picking another costume for me. But I wanted to wear the corpse bride one because I haven’t worn it properly.

“I will wear this one again, but this time with makeup on,” I said, stealing eyes from my mom. She’ll ask for sure, but at the very least I’ll feel as if the previous night never happened. I wasn’t regretting anything until Maddox read my message and didn’t even respond to me. My happiness and excitement went down the drain pretty quickly.

“Okay! I think you really liked this costume.” She proudly handed it to me and shifted her gaze to the opposite side. I put on the dress quickly and let her do the makeup on my face. I’m sure not many people were going to dress sexily for a school party. So I thought I would be fine. However, I was so baffled by Maddox’s behavior that I decided to not take the medicine. Maybe I only felt the mate bond with Helel again.

The reason behind Maddox’s cold behavior could be due to the fact that we are not mates anymore.

I walked out of my room with my mom tailing after me till we reached the foyer, and my heart almost stopped beating. In front of me was Zane S*ade, wearing a devil costume. His beautiful eyes peeping from the black eye mask he was wearing made me feel naked in front of him. The way those eyes scanned me pulled me into a trance.

“Go!” Mom elbowing me, woke me up. I nodded to her and walked over to stand beside him. He was looking devilishly handsome with a black costume on.

I walked out with him and sat in the car in silence.

Neither he nor I said a word. The car ride was nothing like the car ride from the previous night. Maddox and I went through so many emotions in a single night, but Zane seemed cold.

He parked the car in the parking lot of the huge ground that was prepared for the Halloween party and got out without even sparing a glance at me. I assumed he didn't like my costume.

“It is okay; I didn't dress up for him either. Last time I did that for someone, he had fun with me and then left,” I was murmuring to myself when getting out of the car.

I had to run after him to catch up with him. His tall, slender body with incredibly huge shoulders was the talk of the night.

Everyone was staring at him.

“Hey!” It was Flynn who saw him and rushed to meet him. He was wearing a beast's costume.

“Ah! Look who came,” he instantly looked away from Zane to me. I only rolled my eyes and turned my face to the side.

“She has so much attitude,” Flynn commented. “You need to control your stepsister,” Flynn commented because he didn’t know the truth.

“She is not my stepsister,” Zane retorted rudely, “And you! Go walk around, don’t stick to my tail,” Zane coldly dismissed me, walking ahead of Flynn and me.

“You heard him. And if you don’t find anyone to have fun with, remember, you still have an alpha mate,” Flynn walked closer to whisper and then pulled away, briskly walking after Zane.

53 Heli A Devil

The wind was strong since it was an open area.

There were haunted houses prepared for us. The whole arrangement was beautiful, but something seemed a bit off.

I felt like something was about to happen. I felt that back when Maddox and I were doing the nasty in the living room. But I didn’t have any such fears here in the open ground, except for the fact that I didn’t take the medicine because I thought I would be able to sense the mate bond if there was any left with Zane.

However, my wolf hadn't even shown up so far, and I was already 8 hours late for taking the afternoon medicine.

Having no one to talk to, I walked to one corner and stood there aimlessly.

'Beatrice!'

A whisper from afar filled my skin with goosebumps. I looked around but found nothing or anyone.

'Are you waking up already?' I asked my wolf, but she didn't respond.

'Oh, come on! You are going to wake up anytime soon, I know. I missed the afternoon pills and now the night one. I'm sure you'll be bothering me again in two hours,' I scoffed, feeling stupid for talking to someone who had never communicated with me.

53 He Is A Devil

I seemed to be having a battle inside me with my wolf. Isn't it sad that my biggest enemy lives inside me?

"Who am I kidding? She is never going to answer me," I said a bit loudly because I wasn't aiming to talk to her anymore. That's when I heard someone giggling from beside me.

Mariah was standing beside me with her friends and laughing at me. The cheerleader costume she wore looked like her everyday outfit. She might have thought that would make Zane accept her back.

“Look at her, she’s talking to herself,” Mariah exclaimed as she pointed at me. I noticed the passersby instantly stopping to see what was going on. No one would come forward to defend me, but they loved suitable entertainment. “Go away. I don’t want any trouble.” I rolled my eyes and tried to walk past her when she put her hands on me and pushed me away.

“Hey!” I complained, barely keeping my balance and preventing myself from falling on my back.

“What? how is it my fault that you cannot even walk without tripping?” she pouted, faking a sad face and making everybody laugh even louder.

“How is it funny?” I yelled at the others beside her, “Today it is me; tomorrow it might be you. Would you want anyone to laugh at you?” I watched their faces one by one; there was no hint of regret or remorse on anyone’s face. I decided to walk away, but then her comment stole my attention.

“Look at her, she’s trying to instigate everyone like she’s trying to seduce someone close to my heart,” her remark jolted me to a halt.

“What did you say?” I asked her in confusion.

“What? am I lying?” She folded her arms over her chest and shrugged. I saw everyone looking at me and then shaking their heads in disbelief.

“I never seduced Zane,” I whispered, and a frown on her forehead became visible. I had the impression that Zane had duped me. He told me he was done with her, but then why was she talking all this nonsense? Did he tell her something about us?

“I am not talking about—t Zane! Wait! don’t tell me you tried to seduce him,” she gasped in the middle of her words and glared around when everybody shared the same reaction. She wasn’t talking about Zane?

“Isn’t he the one close to your heart?” I asked, not crying or begging them to leave me alone. I didn’t want to be left alone until I cleared this misconception.

“I am talking about my best friend,” she muttered. “I am talking about Flynn,” she added, hissing at my sight. It took me a minute to gather myself and calculate what was going on here.

Flynn told her I seduced him, and she got angry? Why? They are just friends, aren’t they? Besides, why would she be angry.

when he was my mate?

“I don’t understand why you are bit*hing about it when he is my mate and I can do whatever the f*ck I want to do with my mate,” I walked closer to her, towering over her and muttered on her face.

Everybody seemed shocked. It wasn’t every day that a girl with no wolf was threatening an Alpha’s girlfriend. She also had a wolf, much more powerful than my wolf would ever be.

“You bit*h! You dare come to my face.” Mariyah lunged at me and pushed me back. Before I could gather my strength and get back on my feet, she punched me so hard in the jaw that my world shook entirely.

I couldn’t bring myself to get on my feet again.

“Kill the sl*t!”

I heard everyone chanting and hyping her up. She grabbed my hair in a fistful and forced my head up to hit me again. I knew this was my time to fight back, even if I didn’t have a wolf.

It was just that her hitting me angered me. It triggered something inside me. I felt insulted and humiliated.

“How dare you hit me!” I screamed at the top of my lungs before I dug my teeth into her arm.

“Arghhh!” Her blood-curdling scream silenced everyone. I was still able to hear the commotion, but I didn’t let go of her arm.

She was pulling my hair and scratching me with all her might, but I didn’t let go. I didn’t have special teeth like theirs, but mine were enough to cause her pain.

“Help me!” she screamed, as she couldn’t free herself. A metallic taste of blood touched my tongue, and my body flourished like nothing before.

Everything calmed down. The weather turned out to be so beautiful. All I could think of was the taste of her flesh. I could only imagine how tasty her flesh was.

“She is not letting go,” her fainted cries penetrated my ears but I was still clinging to her arm and trying to take as much of her blood as I could.

“Oh my G*d! What is she doing?” Somebody else cried, running around like scared kittens.

“What the heck is happening here?” A familiar voice hit my eardrums, and soon I felt two powerful pairs of arms pulling me away from him. He was so strong that he was able to free her in a heartbeat. Now that my connection with her had broken, I felt light in my head. The voices turned back to normal, which means loud. The world wasn't exquisite anymore, and I was held by Zane.

“AHH! What has she done?” Mariyah was holding her hand around the bite mark and crying, sobbing like the little b*tch she was.

There was blood coming out of the bite mark.

Slowly and steadily, I began to understand what I had just done. The proud look on my face began to shatter once I saw the looks everyone was passing me. They looked scared of me, disgusted of me.

“What did you do?” Flynn reached me in anger and raised his hand to hit me, but Zane dragged me to the other side and I survived the hit.

Zane was still standing behind me, holding me by the arms from the back.

“What are you doing?” Zane yelled at him for raising his hand at me.

“Do you not see what she did to her?” Flynn yelled, walking back to Mariyah and giving her his coat.

“It is hurting so much.” She was weeping when Flynn pulled her over in his arms. It was then that Zane’s grip around my arm softened, and he finally let me go.

He walked past me to pull Mariyah away from Flynn and onto his chest. The two friends shared a very weird look as if Zane were telling him she belonged to him, while I stood to the side, shivering at what just happened. I was bleeding from my nose and lips because of the punches she had successfully landed on my face.

“Everybody! Go back to enjoying your party. We will take care of this matter,” Zane then shouted at the others and sc*tted them around.

“You!” Zane glared at me, tightening his arms around her body, holding her tight and secure.

“To the parking lot,” he said, motioning for me to follow him there. Zane and Mariyah left before us, while Flynn stayed put to make sure I didn’t walk away from the mess.

I wanted to know what was going on. Why was he hugging his ex-girlfriend? So I followed them to the parking lot. I was still in shock at so many things, but the biggest shock I received was when I spotted Zane comforting her by hugging her lovingly in the parking lot.

“What was that all about?” Flynn asked me when he approached me aggressively. My eyes were stuck on Zane and Mariyah.

Why was he holding her close like that?

“What is going on? Why is she in your arms?” I asked, not caring what the others would think of my reaction to Zane and Mariyah.

“Why do you ask?” Mariyah broke the hug and screamed at me, “You f*cking bit me like a ps*cho!” Zane held her back. and rubbed her elbow to calm her down.

“That was very nasty of you,” Flynn commented.

“Flynn! Take her to the restroom and help her clean up. I need to speak to her,” Zane told Flynn, but Mariyah turned to face him.

“Talk to her in front of us,” she insisted, pouting at him.

“Yeah! Talk to me in front of her,” I interrupted the two, not ready to speak to him alone. I was beginning to see some fault in his actions.

He told me he had broken things off with her, so why were they still so close?

“You two think you can corner me and make me submit?” Zane muttered, licking his lips, and then let out a sarcastic chuckle.

“I am not cornering you. I just didn’t understand why you had to speak to her alone. Insult her in front of me,” she demanded as she held her hand around the bite mark and kept staring at him.

“What she did was disappointing, I admit. But what made her act so violently? Why don’t you tell us what you did first?” Zane stepped back from her when questioning her.

“What? I didn’t do anything.” Mariyah raised her voice in shock. She was perplexed by the fact that he was questioning her.

“Then how did she get so many bruises on her face?” Zane asked, walking in my direction and raising my chin by placing his fingers under it.

“What are you doing? Why do you care where she got the bruises from? I can treat her the way I want. Why do you care?” She kept yelling when Zane touching me irked her. I could have stepped away from Zane because I was still upset with his initial response. However, I didn't. I wanted her to see him touch me and gently caress my chin as he kept scanning my face.

"You raising your voice at me is not going to help you. You are making me angry," Zane said, finally pulling his hand away from my face and shoving his hands in his pants pockets. The black wings he was wearing made him look so good, but scary at the same time.

"Okay. I will deal with her my own way then," Mariyah nodded at him as if she was judging him for not taking her side as she expected of him. I bet she had no clue what kinds of relationships were binding Zane to me.

The problem here was the way Zane initially reacted. He didn't even give me a glance when he arrived at the scene.

"Let me clean your wound. He will take care of the matter, right Zane?" Flynn interrupted the two when he noticed they were kind of drifting apart because of the conversation and then offered Mariyah help. She accepted his help and walked away with him while giving Zane a dejected stare. Once they left, Zane lunged my way and grabbed my arm to drag me to our car. I didn't say a word until he shoved me in the car and sat me down in the driver's seat to head back home.

"What was that?" he yelled, gripping the steering wheels tightly and grunting at my actions.

"You tell me what that was," I muttered to him instead of answering him. If anything, he owes me an explanation.

"Why did you attack her?" He ignored my question and continued questioning me angrily.

"Do you think I attacked her? Did you even look at my face?" I didn't even know when I started yelling at him. I used to be so scared and timid, but as always, once I get too comfortable, I lose my poised demeanor.

"Don't raise your voice at me, Beatrice. I am not Flynn, whom you can treat the way you want. I am an alpha king. I don't listen to anyone disrespect me," he sniffed angrily, clenching his jaw when muttering the words.

"You said you broke it off with her. Then why was she in your arms?" I asked, looking out of the window and hiding the tears forming in my eyes.

“We are still friends. And we treat each other with respect and never hesitate to comfort each other. Even Flynn wrapped his arms around her when taking her to the restroom,” he yelled

“Stop the car!” I demanded when I decided I would not let him lie to me.

“Excuse me?” He was probably expecting me to sound guilty and apologize to him for questioning him, but that wouldn’t work.

Not after I saw it with my own f*cking eyes.

“I don’t want to sit in the same car as a liar like you,” I said in a clear tone so that he could hear every single word from my mouth clearly.

He did stop the car but locked the doors so that I wouldn’t leave.

“Did you just call me a liar?” He turned to me after unbuckling his seatbelt.

“I thought you were blind when I saw the way you didn’t see the bruises on my face. I am now realizing you might be deaf too.” I, too, unbuckled the seatbelt so that I could pull back toward the door and turn to him.

“I saw the bruises, but I couldn’t do anything because so many people were watching us. I couldn’t defend you in front of all of them.” He shrugged, yelling exhaustedly when trying to sound like he had no choice.

What a poor guy!

“Oh! So you only grow balls when we are alone?”

This time, when I questioned him, my voice came out in a whisper.

His words and lack of faith in our mate bond deeply hurt me.

“So, you are guilty of being mated to me?” I asked sadly. My confidence went down after watching him look so disturbed when talking about somebody finding out about us.

“Isn’t it obvious? You are mates with the three of us. And then you are also — if things go that way, you will be our stepsister too.

How awkward would it be then?” He turned straight this time. He wasn’t even yelling at me, and neither was I raising my voice at him.

“I guess you are right. Can you drop me home now?” I requested while pulling the seatbelt on again.

“Let’s get rid of the blood first. Your mother will eat our heads if she finds you in this state.” As he reached for the aid box in the glove compartment and told me why he wanted to help clean my wounds, I felt another streak of pain run through my heart.

“It is fine. I will tell her I had a fight with someone and you supported me.” I said, and he stopped, putting the aid box back because he understood I didn’t want to stay in his car for another minute.

“OK,” that was all I heard from him before he dropped me off at home. He didn’t come inside. In fact, I believed he left to attend the party once again.

I was deeply hurt and exhausted. All I wanted was to get some rest, but first, I had to face my mother. The instant I stepped into the living room to meet my mother, I found a rather shocking sight. The two brothers had come back home. Helel and Akin were standing with their father, while my mother was standing at the entrance of the living room. The subject of their attention was a girl sitting on a couch before them.

“She is the girl you rescued?” Lord Vasquez asked Helel, who nodded his head to answer his father.

“I am Gwen Moore!” she whispered her name, hugging her body timidly and not raising her eyes. Her presence made me feel a bit cold. It was like a mist of icy air was surrounding her.

Either that or I was just jealous at the sight of her. Her light green hair was short and rough around the edges. Her pale skin was patchy for whatever reason. She seemed to have some bandages on her arms and around her neck. One could tell she might have just been discharged from the hospital.

“She is going to stay here?” My mother also inquired as to what I had been thinking.

“Yes! I think it is better we keep her here and help her remember more about herself,” Akin answered as if he didn’t want anyone to answer that question.

“I think it is a good idea. She can make friends with Beatrice.” As Lord Vasquez found me standing behind my mother, he said my name, and everybody looked my way.

Gwen raised her head to cast a quick glance at me before my mother could even comment on my bruised face. She had emerald green, long, and deep eyes.

I felt shivers run down my spine at the few seconds of eye contact between us.

“What happened to your face? Did anybody hurt you?” My mother forgot about the other girl because her dear daughter looked like a mess. She cupped my face in her hands and kept observing my face.

56-They Brought A New Shewall Home.

“I got into a tussle with someone,” I said, shaking my head to free myself from her grip. I was still not sure how to respond to the whole night, which turned into a big question for me.

From Zane befuddling my mind to the brothers bringing in the hot, lost girl, everything seemed to go against me.

“Where was Zane all that time?” My mother’s tone was harsh when talking about him.

“He was there! He sorted out the fight,” I lied. He didn’t do that. He hugged his beloved so-called friend and walked her away from me. In fact, how can I forget the look he gave me in front of everyone?

“But you are not the type to get into physical altercations,” my mother pouted sadly.

“Her wolf has been caged behind medicines. The frustration will only grow with time.” Helel’s comment made me look his way.

His eyes were sticking to my face in bewilderment.

“I think we shouldn’t bother her too much and clean her injuries first,” Akin said as he mentioned me for the first time since our argument the other day.

“I am fine,” I excused them all, probably confusing them with my reaction. I didn’t wait around and sped upstairs to wash my face and change into something more comfortable. When I got to the bathroom, I started crying. "Why did she come here?" I muttered to myself, walking back and forth in the bathroom. "She was sitting there like a little queen. The brothers looked so concerned for her." I felt rage run through my body at the memory of her. "She better not try to seduce them into falling for her," I muttered, standing before the mirror and gripping the sink angrily. It was crazy that I was able to have a full-on conversation with myself. I was looking into my eyes and silently thinking about the ways I could get the attention of the brothers. "I must not act st*pidly. I shall not drift away," I whispered, deepening the eye contact with my reflection in the mirror. In all this mess, I forgot to take the bl*ody medicines. But my wolf didn't bother to show herself. She stayed hidden for whatever reason, and I too didn't think too much about it. After a few minutes of sulking and muttering in the bathroom, I answered the door to my mother, who bandaged me up well.

“I wish I could take you with me tomorrow. But the only reason I am comfortable is because of the arrival of this new girl. I am sure the brothers will be distracted by her, and you will get to live here peacefully.” My mother whispered while lying in bed with me. She was thinking completely the opposite of what I wanted.

The next morning, I woke up early with my mom and had breakfast with her. Akin dropped them off at the airport while I stayed awake in the foyer. I was waiting for Akin to return home so that I could speak to him before Gwen woke up and stole all of their attention. While in the foyer, I kept feeling itchy in the back.

I had to rub my back against the couch like a bear for I don't know how long. The more I itched, the more irritation it caused.

"It is not okay," I whispered to myself, feeling a little sweaty, but not too bad since it was too cold already.

"I need to meet Akin and see if my wolf connects with him. After that, I am taking my medicine—s," I grunted, running my arms behind my back to itching my skin more violently.

That's when Akin's car arrived in the parking lot, and

I jumped to my feet to run into him. I stood at the entrance and watched him get out of the car and walk my way. He was frowning when he approached the door.

“Why are you standing here?” he asked, trying to walk past me.

“Remember, you said we need to see if I am mated to you all?” I whispered, opening my arms to block his way inside.

“Yes, I recall suggesting that,” he stepped back, his face puzzled.

“So! I didn’t take the medicines. All we need to do is touch each other and se—,” I was in the process of rambling my thoughts to him when he shut me up a little too harshly.

“Wait! no! you want to know if you are mates with me? That’s disgusting.” he grimaced at my suggestion, “I remember suggesting we should see just so that I can find a way to free us all from your mate bond,” he looked so devastated when hearing about what I wanted in that moment.

I didn’t know being mated to me would be such a disgusting thing to him. Nobody was happy to learn I was their mate, from Flynn to these brothers.

“But what about me? I cannot lose all my mates,” I whispered in a dejected tone.

“Beatrice! You are going to be my stepsister. I am not taking part in anything that would question my morals,” he complained, raising his hands to show he wasn’t touching me. “Akin!” Just when I was going to argue with him, the b*tch woke up. Her sweet, innocent voice distracted us from the serious conversation. He looked behind me, and the frown on his face disappeared. His eyes held so much respect for her that even I was surprised.

“What made you wake up so early, Gwen?” he asked, and he almost shoved me aside to get inside and approach her. She was wearing a white silk nightgown that was able to fall perfectly over her breasts and hip bones. She was petite, and I was curvy. At that very moment, I realized I needed to get something similar to that. Imagine the silk falling so perfectly over my curvy body.

“I was uncomfortable in my bedroom,” she replied, hugging herself. Akin didn’t waste a single minute before taking off his coat and wrapping it around her body..

“No! I am fine,” she instantly took it off and stepped back from him, “I am so sorry. I am just not-my body doesn’t react well to anyone touching me.” she sounded so pure. I am sure Akin thought about it too because he smiled innocently at her statement.

“I understand. Don’t worry, I will keep my germs to myself,” he joked, awkwardly taking back his coat. “But then you will have to sit by the fireplace while I prepare breakfast for you,” he rushed over to the fireplace and set it up for her. The way he was running around for her comfort seemed like a young boy in love. I stood in the corner, watching them interact like a third party.

I wasn’t even feeling like the lead in my story.

“I don’t want you to waste your time cooking food for me,” she sat down by the fireplace, watching him wrap a blanket around her but making sure he didn’t even lay a finger on her. Was it the reason they didn’t respect me?

Maybe I was reluctant. Would they also pursue me?

“It is fine. It was our idea to bring you here and take care of you. So please don’t keep apologizing or thanking us,” Akin. said in a very sweet tone. I don’t remember him ever talking to me in this tone.

He was so gentle with her. She gave him a smile as he walked away from her.

“Go back to your room, and I don’t want to hear about that topic again,” he said to me, motioning me to leave Gwen alone.

I watched him get into the kitchen to prepare breakfast for her, so I chased after him to have a word with him.

“What is it about her that you were giggling like a schoolgirl in front of her?” I almost raised my voice, sounding super jealous with the way my hands were tightly turned into fists.

“Are you jealous of her? Beatrice! For heaven’s sake, you are my— stepsister; you should-ugh!” he grunted when trying to speak to me. What happened to the fluency of speech from earlier?

“I didn’t take the medicines so that I could find out who my mates are. I am not going to let it go in vain after being tormented inside for hours.” Rejecting his idea of not discussing the mate bond, I bolted closer to him and got on my tiptoes to plant a quick kiss on his cheek. He wasn’t expecting us, but his response was quick.

He stepped back from me, growling in rage, ready to push me back but holding in the desire. That's when we heard it, Akin's eyes grew in size when he realized I wasn't just trying to irritate him. I was right! We were mates. I couldn't express why I felt so happy, but he didn't share the same feeling. He looked rather disgusted and shocked.

"I told you to go back to your room," he muttered, approaching me with much anger and putting his fist down on the kitchen island.

"But hiding from the truth is not going to benefit any of us," I argued with him. I probably didn't realize how thirsty I sounded, but it was a must. My wolf badly wanted to be mates with them. Maybe it was the Moon Goddess' way to protect me from whoever was coming for me.

She gave me so many mates who can protect me when the time comes. As of now, he doesn't seem to be in the mood for any games.

"I don't accept this truth," he muttered, grunting as he couldn't raise his voice at me. He was probably too ashamed to be heard by sweet Gwen in the living room.

"Why? Because you are interested in her?" I blocked his way when he tried to get past me. He didn't even want to stand in the same kitchen as me.

“Beatrice!” he yelled angrily, closing his eyes and muttering, “I reject you!” he said, his face emotionless.

“I, Alpha King Akin, reject Beatrice Mintz as my mate. Happy now?” He got closer to my face to make sure I was staring into his eyes when he rejected me.

‘Mate!’

I heard my wolf’s call for him, and I bet he heard it, too. The instant he rejected me, we were back to being mates.

“What the f*ck! How are you doing it?” he yelled in his mouth, tightly zipping his lips when he was afraid of Gwen.

“I am not doing anything,” I retorted, tired of these brothers accusing me like I was some witch. “Then make it stop,” he warned me, his finger moving up and down as he trembled because of extreme rage.

“How? If an alpha king cannot control his wolf, how can an omega like me do it?” I argued with him and refused to get out of his way.

I was stubborn!

“I will call my dad and talk to him about this because this is getting out of hand now.” As soon as he talked about our parents, I stepped back and walked aside.

“Don’t. My mom will be furious at me,” I requested. My attitude changed just by listening to his threat.

“I don’t care. It needs to be done because I am not accepting you as my mate. Not in this life, not in any life,” Akin said in the most emotionless tone ever. I felt it right through my heart, but I refused to show him my emotions anymore.

“Now go back to your room,” he pointed at the exit and I followed his instructions. I dashed out of the kitchen and upstairs, not looking back at the lucky pig in the living room. I wondered if the brothers would have shown the same reaction if I wasn’t going to be their stepsister. or me being an omega also playing some role in their disgust at the idea of mating with a weak she-wolf like me?

I didn’t expect to bump into Zane when I reached my room because I thought he hadn’t come home. He was in the process of crossing the hallway when I almost hit him.

“Be careful,” he voiced, watching me step back and rub my hands over my face.

“You are crying?” he asked, stepping in my way when I decided to walk past him to my room.

“It doesn’t matter. My mates are just cold werewolves,” I complained, even when I didn’t want to.

“Which mate hurt you now?” he asked, hunching over since he was too tall to be able to look into my eyes without bending to my level.

“Akin!” The moment I whispered his name, I heard a yelp from Zane.

“Akin is your mate?” he asked in bewilderment.

“I just felt the mate bond with him. He rejected me, but we felt it again in the same few minutes. He said he will talk to my mother about it. I don’t know how helpful it would be, but she will be very upset with me. She will take me away from here, and I don’t want to leave.” I was yammering my heart out to him. I know he doesn’t plan to accept me anytime soon either, but at least he wouldn’t want me gone. Or so I thought.

“Why? It is not like we treat you well. Everybody upsets you and comments on your ways. You get bullied in school, then why stay here?" he placed his hand on the wall to block my way. His beautiful eyes shone when our eyes connected.

"Because I have never felt so safe before," I whispered, and the corner of his lip stretched upward. He stood there in silence before his eyes traveled to my lips.

"You are not grossed out if I feel the mate bond with you again?" I asked him in a whisper since his stare was beginning to make me feel wild.

"I am not afraid of challenges, Beatrice!" he smirked openly this time before he bent over more and brushed his lips over mine. I felt a spark run through my body, and then my wolf said.

'Mate!'

As I pulled away from him, I found him looking back at me with shine and excitement in his eyes. He was the only one who always reacted positively when we discovered we were mates. I almost felt confused whenever it happened.

"Don't worry about Akin. I'll talk to him. He won't send you away," he said confidently as he made deeper eye contact with me.

“You would do that?” I asked, and he nodded without breaking eye contact with me.

“I would, Beatrice!” He didn’t smirk this time but removed his hand so that I could easily get past and enter my room.

59-Too Seductive

1788 Vouchers

After a few hours of being alone in my bedroom, I got called into the living room by the brothers once again. At this point, I was not well. I was feeling hot, sweating, in fact. I walked downstairs with my eyes misty because of the pain between my shoulders and watched the brothers in the living room. When I first entered the room, I didn't even notice Maddox sitting among them. I didn't know when he returned, but the pain had occupied my brain so much that I missed noticing him until after a few minutes had passed.

"Are you okay?" Helel asked, making me lift my face and watch him stare at me. It was only then that I looked around and noticed Maddox, too.

"I am fi-ne," I answered, my throat feeling dry.

"Did you take any medications?" Helel continued to ask me. The brothers had definitely talked about me and how I felt the mate bond with Akin and Zane.

"I didn't," I shook my head and that's when I recalled I haven't felt the mate bond with Maddox again, "I was waiting for Maddox to come," I said.

Maddox cleared his throat, stealing eyes from his brothers, and then, upon the gesture of Helel, he got up from his seat and approached me.

“Let’s check that one out as well,” he shrugged, looking around for his brothers’ reactions. They were on board with the idea.

Even when Akin didn’t appreciate my trying to find out if he was my mate or not, he looked much calmer now.

Maddox kneeled down beside my sofa and stared into my eyes, pulling his hand out for me. I watched him for a moment, and then instead of going for his hand; I hugged myself.

“What happened?” Maddox whispered, noticing how reluctant I looked. He could tell I was upset with him about the other night and him abandoning me.

“Come on!” he whispered.

Now that I knew the brothers were watching me, I couldn’t continue acting like a m*ron. I needed to get over it so that I could take my pills and be relieved of this pain.

I finally gave him my hands, and as we waited, the hopes of feeling the mate bond started to vanish. A frown covered both of our foreheads. Even the brothers were a little taken aback this time.

“Perhaps they aren’t—,” I sensed as Akin was about to say it.

‘Mate!’

I closed my eyes and sighed in relief. I don’t know why I did that, but the brothers noticed it, and it didn’t sit well with them.

Maddox didn’t respond very openly. He just walked over to his seat and sat down calmly. At this point, it was pretty clear who wanted to be mates and who wasn’t interested in their mates. I was the only one who desperately wanted to be mated with them.

“Now what?” Maddox rested his back against the couch’s backrest and looked at his brothers. Who seemed to be getting lost in the sea of thoughts.

59-Too Seductive

“I think we should let our dad know. It is not okay that we are feeling mate bond with our stepsister while he is screwing her mother.” Akin’s tone and words were really harsh this time. I have not heard him talk so rudely before.

“And what do you think will happen, then? It is not like he will give up on her mother, and neither can we reject her,” Zane argued, something he told me he would do.

Helel and Akin looked his way, questioning him through their eyes.

“So what are you suggesting? That we accept her and bang her one by one every night?” Helel muttered, looking all grossed out at the idea of it. Even my body shuddered when hearing that kind of talk from his lips.

‘It will be amazing,’

I heard her say it from inside. I looked around in shock and instantly looked down again. I should have taken the pills.

‘Just look at him. Imagine you are getting f*cked by him, and then the other brothers join and fill all your holes. Ever imagine taking two di*ks in one hole? Ohh! That pain will be so sweet,’ she said seductively, moaning slightly at the horrible thought.

I trembled and hugged myself, trying to look unfazed by her dirty fantasies.

“I am just saying it’s not like Father can come up with better advice,” Zane argued when they looked his way with quizzical stares. They were probably judging him harshly.

Just a crazy thought. What do you think they will do if you strip naked before them right here and spread your legs for them?

Which one of them would take the lead and fill you in first?’ She was talking a bunch of nonsense and making me sweat more and more.

She then started talking about the bulges in their pants, and my eyes shamelessly started to drift in that dejection. I had to keep my head lowered and fight hard not to look at them. “Besides, her mother will beat her up again if we tell her anything,” It was Maddox who interrupted them this time.

“Again? what do you mean by that?” Akin’s harshness faded away when his brother’s comment made him question him.

“She hits her?” Helel joined in, making me nervous at the way they were reacting to that news. My mother had hit me before, but she only does that because she cares too much about me. And I can be a little too stubborn at times.

“Last time, when her mother thought she had lost her virginity, she beat her up till she left a visible bruise over her cheek,” Maddox recalled that day. I noticed the look the brothers gave me, and it shocked me.

The brothers shared an intense look before they turned to me again.

“She hit her?” Akin sounded so loud. “She left a mark on her face, and we didn’t see it?” He seemed to have questioned himself this time.

“No! She thought I hurt myself. She would never beat me for finding a mate,” I smiled awkwardly, “She doesn’t like the idea of me finding a mate, that’s very true but not because—,” I paused when trying to excuse my mother’s constant reminder of not finding a mate.

“Because? Why doesn’t she want you to find a mate?” Akin slouched down, focusing on my face for his response.

“Because— of yes! Because that will only be possible if I s*ip my medicines, and she doesn’t want me to do that. The day I completely stop taking my pills, my scent will reach him,” I said, repeating my mother’s exact words to them.

“Just out of curiosity, who is he?” Helel questioned, making the others look more attentively at my face now.

I was nervous about the way they were watching me, but then I felt maybe it was because they were worried about me. I could see the tension on their faces after Maddox told them my mother hit me. They acted like they didn’t care, but now they were all ears and ready to help me in any way possible. I felt special at that moment.

But before I could answer them, I found their gaze traveling behind me and a shine appearing in their eyes.

“Gwen!” Helel and Akin said her name in unison. Goosebumps crept over my skin when I watched them look so happy when seeing her.

Maddox and Zane shared a glance before they too fixed their eyes on her.

Why was this happening?

These were my mates. Why were they more attentive to her than me?

“When did she come here?” Maddox, who had been paying attention to my matter, asked, looking distracted.

“We brought her in last night,” Helel answered, getting out of his seat to offer her his place. She steadily shook her head, sticking to the corner timidly. The way she was acting and the way they were reacting to her were giving me major main-character vibes.

Even in my life, she looked like a heroine, and I might look like a villain.

“Come, sit here,” Helel insisted, and she finally accepted his offer. She walked over and sat down in his place, her head lowered and her hands tied in her lap.

“Are you feeling okay now?” Akin adjusted his coat before asking her how she was feeling, and in response to him, she only nodded.

I was silently glaring at her.

‘Don’t worry! She might be getting their attention by acting all scared and sweet, but your beauty can seduce the f*ck out of them. All you need to do is keep me alive inside you, and I will help you get to them,’ my wolf mumbled, convincing me not to take the medicines.

‘You are not talking to me. That’s the problem. You take advice from the wrong people,’ she grunted as she probably mentioned my mother.

‘I don’t even know you. I don’t feel like you are a part of me,’ I responded to her bitterly.

‘You can know me anytime you want. Here! Let me introduce myself to you. I am Ace! Your special wolf,’ she whispered, and my body formed visible goose pimples.

“I feel like I am bothering you guys,” Gwen’s whisper made me look at her and divert attention away from my wolf.

“You are not.” Akin shook his head, confirming they were okay with her staying here.

“By the way, these are the other two twins. Maddox and Zane have visited you in the hospital, but you were in a coma, so they couldn’t communicate with you.” Helel then introduced the other two brothers to her, who was looking at her like a child staring at a candy shop from across the glass door.

“Thank you so much. Can I ask you guys a question?” She asked sweetly, and they all nodded in unison.

“I noticed you brothers sometimes introduce each other as alphas and not alpha kings. Why is that?” She looked so innocent when asking that question that not only the brothers but even I couldn’t look away from her face for a moment.

“It is because our crowning hasn’t happened yet. So we kind of flip-flop between terms,” Maddox responded to her with a smile so sweet that it burned my heart.

“Don’t do that. You are alpha kings, even if the crowning takes years. Always use the right title,” she tilted her head to speak to

Maddox from afar and I watched him get excited a little more than the others.

“We will do that. I am glad you take such things so seriously,” Akin looked so impressed when complimenting her for her consideration. I couldn't help but roll my eyes and scoff at them.

Just when I averted my eyes from her, I made an eye contact with Zane, who was staring at me instead of Gwen this time. There was a slight smirk on his lips, and his eyes shone when watching me. It was as if he was having pleasure seeing me get so jealous that I decided to get up and leave.

“I will be in my room now,” I muttered, and neither of them responded to me because Akin was busy talking about the history of werewolves with Gwen now. She was paying so much attention to him.

I ran upstairs to take the medicine. My wolf was getting hornier with every passing minute, so I needed to calm down one b*tch at a time.

I had only taken out the pills on my palm when Zane arrived from the back and held my hand to prevent me from taking those pills.

“Hey!” I complained, watching him throw them away and push me against the wall.

“What did she say?” he smirked, caging me between his arms when placing his hands on either side of the wall.

“I don’t know. I didn’t pay attention to her.” I turned my face to the other side when talking about Gwen.

“I am not talking about her. I am talking about your wolf. She spoke to you, didn’t she? Tell me, what did she say?” He insisted, looking very intrigued by the fact that he had scared me.
